

Stephen C. Movius

Vice President of Business Management and Chief Financial Officer
Northrop Grumman Information Systems

Stephen C. Movius is vice president of business management and chief financial officer for Northrop Grumman's Information Systems sector. In this role, he is responsible for all sector business management encompassing finance, accounting, contracts, pricing, procurement, regulatory and export compliance, real estate and facilities.

He served in similar roles for Northrop Grumman's Mission Systems sector from March 2003 to January 2009 and for its Information Technology sector from January 2001 to February 2003.

Mr. Movius joined Northrop Grumman in 1995 as the vice president of business management for the Data Systems and Services division. In 1998, he was named vice president of business management for Logicon when the newly acquired Logicon subsidiary was combined with the Data Systems and Services division. He held this position through 2000 and provided financial leadership to the sector, especially in merger and acquisition and subsequent integration activities as several significant companies (PRC, TASC, Fed Data, Sterling Federal, DPC, Comtek) were folded into the sector. In 2001 the sector was renamed Northrop Grumman Information Technology as Mr. Movius continued to provide financial leadership over the newly reorganized $4 billion sector.

Before joining Northrop Grumman, Mr. Movius had been with PRC Inc. for 10 years. He began his PRC career as business manager of its West coast division and was later named controller of its Engineering Technology group.

After serving as vice president of finance for the Engineering Technology group, Mr. Movius assumed the role of chief financial officer for PRC's Federal Systems group. He has also held financial positions at TRW and XELAN.

Mr. Movius earned a bachelor's degree from California State University, Fresno, and a master's degree in business administration from the University of Southern California.
